TUNISIAN NAVAL BASE OF BIZERTE MUST BE TAKEN BY A DIRECT NAVAL ATTACK COMBINED WITH LAND ASSAULT

State of Siege Has Been Proclaimed Throughout Tunisia, BBC Broadcast States—Allied Position in North African War Theatre is Considered Generally Satisfactory

(By International News Service)

LONDON, Nov. 12—The Tunisian naval base of Bizerte must be taken by direct naval attack combined with a land assault, a British naval spokesman declared today coincident with announcement that at least 38 Axis planes had been knocked out in a series of forays near Tunis, capital of the African French colony.

The separate announcements were made as American and Axis forces converged on Tunisia at breakneck speed for an engagement to determine control of all North Africa and reports reached London that a sea battle was raging in the Sicilian narrows between the island and the African coast.

(A state of siege has been proclaimed throughout Tunisia, a BBC broadcast said last night. All meetings are forbidden, places of entertainment have been closed and a curfew imposed, it was reported. BBC did not say who proclaimed the state of siege.)

An American spokesman at Allied headquarters in London disclosed that the Allied position in the North African war theatre was generally satisfactory.

Any German denial that Nazi air-borne forces have entered Tunisia, as announced by Allied headquarters yesterday, he said obviously was false.

He said he had no information as yet on whether American or British forces already have entered Tunisia to challenge Axis possession of strategic air fields and port cities. Neither could he reveal how far eastward the Allied forces under command of American Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had penetrated through Algeria.

It was felt in London, however, that at any hour word might be received of the first fighting in this war between United States troops and the Germans flown hurriedly to Tunisia.

The American spokesman said London headquarters had no reports concerning the French West African base of Dakar but he thought that Dakar now was in a rather hopeless position following capitulation of all Morocco and Algeria.

The situation at the Moroccan port of Casablanca where French resistance had been strong seems well in hand, he added.

THE WAR AT A GLANCE

By International News Service
American and Axis forces were reported racing today to the Tunisian ports of Bizerte and Tunis as battle developments over the whole Mediterranean area swept towards a crisis. The situation was obscured by a flood of rumors and unconfirmed reports, many of which were inspired for propaganda and to cloak forthcoming military moves in as much confusion as possible.

A mighty sea battle was reported raging in the Sicilian Straits where the island of Sicily and the Tunisian shore form a narrow passage through the central Mediterranean. There was no confirmation of this report, but military observers recalled that the British Admiralty yesterday announced that one of its submarines had scored hits on enemy naval units in that general area.

It was held also that the Germans undoubtedly will attempt to get troop convoys to Tunisia or Libyan Tripoli, and that the British Navy will certainly make every effort to prevent such troop movements.

Meantime whereabouts of the main French fleet, which had been based at Toulon, was hidden in a maze of contradictions. Axis sources, including Vichy, maintained the French warships were still at their berths, despite earlier reports that it had steamed out to join the Allied forces. An invitation to do just this was issued to the French Navy in repeated broadcasts of a statement by U. S. Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

German troops which yesterday swept into unoccupied France in violation of the armistice terms were reported today to have reached Marseilles, some 40 miles from Toulon, while forces of the puppet Mussolini marched in from the east into the Riviera towns.

Following a fruitless protest against this occupation, Marshal Henri Philippe Petain was reported to have fled Vichy for a haven in Spain or Africa, possibly accompanied by Marshal Maxime Weygand. But Vichy disclaimed this with the announcement that the Marshal remained at his Vichy headquarters.

With the whole of Morocco and Algeria pacified through the "cease fire" order of Admiral Jean Francois Darlan, the Allies were free to make new moves, and there was a strong possibility that the considerable Allied forces in Africa might be joined by the French colonial armies.

In this connection the statement by British Production Minister Lyttleton that 500 transport and supply ships and 350 warships had been assembled in PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12 (INS)—Pennsylvania's inns, long famous for their country cooking and generous servings, are on their way out.

Terse "closed for the duration" signs tell the tale of gasoline and tire rationing that led to decreases up to 75 per cent of the hostelry's business. The cash register in Bucks County's Cat and the Fiddle, for instance, which once rang up a daily average of $350, recently totalled 35 cents.

"We couldn't have kept it going this long," Mrs. Joseph N. Aaron, wife of the proprietor said, "if it hadn't been for our victory garden. When a customer came in I used to bring in from the garden whatever was in season."

SCHOOL HELPS DEVELOP FINE, LOYAL CITIZENS; RESPONSIBILITIES OF CITIZENSHIP MUST FIRST BE ACCEPTED, STATES LOCAL STUDENT IN ESSAY

"Developing Loyal Citizens" is the subject of a special article written by Ruth Steiner, of 9-2 class, Bristol high school, as a contribution to the series of articles prepared by local high school pupils in observance of American Education Week. The essay follows:

By Ruth Steiner

The school helps develop loyal citizens.

We are not born voters, but every American is born a citizen. We can start our lives by claiming and enjoying the privileges and accepting the responsibilities of citizenship in order to develop a loyal citizen, for responsibilities and privileges go together. The dictionary says that a citizen is entitled to the protection of life, liberty, and property at home and abroad. Not all citizens in countries other than ours enjoy these privileges.

Naturally we accept these privileges as a part of our everyday life. Why not, for we have been born with them. But it is our loyal citizens who more fully appreciate them and who are willingly fighting and working to keep these privileges.

School plays the most important part in developing loyal citizens. Every class and activity works toward the one glorious goal. Every year schools become more and more aware of the fact that it is their job to give their pupils an opportunity to become loyal citizens. Civics gives the best training for citizens although every class, sport, club, and activity contribute. Civics teaches government, parliamentary procedure, how to vote wisely and correctly. In general, how our freedom-loving country is run.

Our ever-important English class teaches us how to make well-formed speeches, to do complete, well-planned work.

Our other classes teach us many things that some people wouldn't even consider essential to developing loyal citizens. For instance, policing the school grounds and keeping them clean, planning assembly programs, teaching pupils to develop an interest in hobbies, books, movies, phonograph records, and newspapers.

Courtesy, respect, obedience, and loyalty to God, your country and yourself deserve special attention.

Health is emphasized in the schools of today for it plays an important part in insuring our safety and privileges granted to us by our democracy. Under-nourished and unhealthy citizens are not loyal citizens. Sports not only insure health but teach cooperation, responsibility, obedience to rules, alertness, fair play, keenness, and, above all, honesty.

Other familiar activities of the school, such as clubs, combine with sports in enabling pupils to be leaders, and to follow others.

Football games and rallies, musicals and plays, and even the school cafeteria are a part of developing loyal citizenship.

If a pupil does his school work well and participates in activities and clubs, he should be a loyal citizen.

Deadline Near On Filing Insurance Claims

Wheat farmers having severe crop damage in 1942 and participating in the government crop insurance program must file application for indemnity not later than November 15 to have consideration given their application, according to Russel K. Edwards, chairman of the Bucks County Agricultural Conservation Committee.

Indemnities to wheat farmers in Pennsylvania who had their '42 wheat crop insured in the Federal Crop Insurance program reached a total, November 2, of 47,497 bushels, compared with '42 premium bushels collected of approximately 50,436 bushels, he reported.

Insurance is written in terms of wheat, not value; but, figured at $1.30 per bushel, the present average market price, the indemnities now reach a total value of over $60,000. Much crop loss this year, Mr. Edwards said, was the result of the unusually wet weather.

Crop insurance written for the 1943 wheat crop in Pennsylvania totals 8,606 policies, compared to the 7,093 policies of this year, a 21 per cent increase.

LATEST NEWS BULLETINS

British On Heels of Rommel's Forces

Cairo—The British Eighth Army is on the heels of retreating Axis forces deep into Cyrenaica, and Allied aircraft are constantly pounding dense Axis transport columns on the jammed roads, a Middle East command communique declared today.

Stragglers are continuing to fall into the hands of British forces and are being sent to the rear.

During Wednesday the rapid British advance caught up with the Axis war force which also was said to be in retreat, and forced it into action with the result that 23 enemy aircraft were destroyed, including six large troop transport ships.

RAF Attacks Airdromes Near Tunis

London—RAF fighters attacked airdromes near Tunis in a series of forays on Tuesday and knocked out at least 38 planes, an official communique disclosed today.

RAF bombers continued attacks on Axis airdromes on the Italian island of Sardinia Tuesday and Wednesday nights, the communique added. Ten British planes were reported missing from these operations.

Nazis Proclaim "Hands Off" French Fleet

London—Nazi Germany today mysteriously proclaimed a "hands off" policy regarding the French fleet at Toulon as German and American armies staged a breakneck race for occupation and mastery of strategic Tunisia.

The Vichy radio, now under Nazi control, announced that French naval chiefs at Toulon had voiced their intention to "resist all aggression" as a result of which the city was designated a "safe harbor."

WILL REORGANIZE SCHOOL COURSES FOR VICTORY CORPS

Bristol High Pupils To Have Part in Aiding During This Crisis

TRAIN ACCORDINGLY

Young Folks Will Thus Prepare To Fill Definite Posts in Future

With the adoption by the school board of the Victory Corps program for Bristol high school, courses offered at the local school are to be reorganized to carry out as fully as possible activities of the new endeavor.

Realizing that the present war is and will be a hard one, "a war demanding every ounce of energy and sacrifice and devotion" that can be mustered, Superintendent Warren P. Snyder, Principal David Hertzler, other members of the faculty, and the directors, are bending every effort to set the plan in motion within as short a space of time as possible.

In a statement issued regarding the Victory Corps it is mentioned that "Training facilities within the armed forces themselves have been stepped up, but are still inadequate to train with sufficient rapidity the enormous numbers of specialists needed. The Army and Navy must use to the fullest possible extent the facilities of our trade and vocational schools, of our general high schools, of every training institution in the nation for preliminary preparation of auto mechanics, male nurses, radio repairmen, radio operators, machinists, surveyors, instrument repairmen, typists, and a host of other specialists."

"The younger able-bodied males will be in the armed forces. The war production labor forces must more and more be recruited from girls, women and older men."

"This means that many girls now in high schools should be preparing for industrial occupations and for agriculture. Others should be preparing to take the place of men in stores and offices and in essential community services so important in maintaining health and stability under the stress and strain of war. . . . In view of the all-out struggle for the survival of democratic peoples and their ways of life, there can be no question whatever that 'high school as usual' will not be possible during the duration of this supreme conflict. This does not mean that the high school will throw overboard certain well established fields of instruction, particularly in those areas where sound general education is still desirable. . . . The war effort is not limited to fighting on the actual war fronts. But to make the effort on the war front more effective there is need for understanding, morale, production and preparation at home. The task of the high school to contribute to these efforts at home becomes of immediate importance and significance upon the passage of legislation which will soon call upon boys of the years of 18 and 19 to selective service."

VICTORY COALITION

Senator Vandenberg's proposal that Republican and Democratic groups in both House and Senate join in a victory coalition to speed Congressional action on necessary war measures has much merit, but it should be carefully examined for its implications.

One of its effects would be to separate the President from the little group of New Dealers upon whom he has called for advice in all critical war situations. He has not consulted the opposition. He has conducted the war as a New Deal enterprise.

The President is rated as an unusually able politician, but this reputation is based on his long march at the head of a majority. He had two terms as governor of New York, followed by three successful campaigns for the Presidency.

He is now confronted by a different political situation. He suffered a severe set-back in wartime. He all but lost the House of Congress. The call upon his political sagacity now is to deal with a robust opposition which in critical moments can undoubtedly summon enough anti-New Deal members to defeat the administration.

It will be hard for the President to put aside the dreamers, spenders, and state socialists who have ridden along with him in victory, and to deal with strong, aggressive and unyielding Congressional leaders—men of the type of Joe Martin. The role of pleader and advocate will not be pleasant after all these years of giving the orders, wielding the rubber stamp, and handing out the jobs.

But Mr. Roosevelt can do it, and he may see, as this coalition plan is discussed, that he will be able to do it better if he meets the proposal in the making.

FOOD QUOTAS

Federal agencies charged with the duty of allocating available food supplies throughout the country adopted a percentage or quota basis.

First an arbitrary date was chosen, after which dealers were advised that they might not sell more than a certain percentage of their previous volume. This has guided coffee distribution, and its application to other primary foods is proposed.

The procedure probably is reasonable for communities where the population has remained unchanged or has actually declined due to the draft, etc. If a city had 50,000 population a year ago and has the same number of inhabitants now, all its people are affected equally by the reduction of quotas. But if a city has made an unusual gain in population, both old and new residents get less of the rationed foods than the program seeks to allow.

Quotas figured on the actual or estimated population of various centers where war efforts are being concentrated would be fair. Rationing food on previous levels that no longer exist obviously is discriminatory and the effect is to penalize and restrict the very centers that are supposed to be doing the most to aid the war effort. Some people put it the other way, saying the war effort is doing the most to aid these centers, but no matter.

The result is that coffee, etc., is distributed on an inequitable basis when population shifts are ignored.

General MacArthur says he started as a soldier and will finish as one. Unless he is called to the White House, that is.

W RULING AFFECTS READY-MADE CLOTHES; PATTERNS LIKEWISE

By Edna Stephany

Home Economics Representative women who buy their clothing made this fall will want to be better acquainted with the much better of term "L-85."

"L-85" is the ruling, made by the Production Board, which controls amount of material used in women's dresses, suits, coats, and blouses. The purpose of the ruling is to conserve material and do away with excess yardage formerly used for skirts, large pockets, wide belts, long jackets. The ruling also restricts the duplication of material, as double yokes, cuffs and wide skirts.

Edgings, jackets with dresses, three-piece suits are considered a duplication of material and cannot be used as one costume. However, they may be bought separately and worn together.

The effect of the ruling on the clothing industry has been a simplification of styles. It means that the trim silhouettes will last more than one or two seasons and that skirts will remain in length becoming to the individual. As in ready-made dresses are two pieces wide and the sleeves are similar and usually are short or bracelet length.

When clothing is exempted from the restrictions, included in the exempt list is clothing for children from four to six years of age, maternity dresses and clothing for persons over 65 years of age, or persons of unusual size or physical deformity. Women who make their own clothes use commercial patterns also will find similar restrictions. "Limited Order L-153" has two exceptions to the order for ready-made clothing. First, there are no severe restrictions for the amount of wool in dress because it is impossible to know which pattern is used for wool which for rayon or cotton. Second, a five per cent leeway in measurements is allowed, so that patterns now in use, which only slightly exceed the minimum measurements permitted in L-85, may still be used.

February 1, 1943, new patterns were in circulation. However, there already are many patterns that conform to the ruling. It is easy for women who sew to alter patterns that are too generous with material that they may conform to the new ruling.

Looking out from the windows of railroad trains and motor cars skirting the Susquehanna, Schuylkill, or Lehigh rivers in Pennsylvania the traveler may observe a very strange operation being performed out on those streams. Fleets of boats bearing structures that resemble old fashioned locomotives are anchored among the shallows and appear to be the scene of a mysterious activity which few strangers understand. It is rare even for Pennsylvanians living away from these rivers to realize that the fleets of coal dredgers, so busy in all but the winter season on these three rivers, represent an industry the like of which does not exist anywhere else in the western world. The dredging of anthracite from the eastern rivers of Pennsylvania has been proceeding now for more than 50 years and was, in fact, one of the first American examples of the salvaging of waste products for industrial use.

River coal which darkens the sands of the Susquehanna, the Schuylkill and the Lehigh, represents powdered and finely ground anthracite washed down the rivers from the mining operations of a generation ago. In the earlier days of mining operations in the hard coal region the small sizes of coal had no commercial value. Around every mine was accumulated a great pile of this finely ground unmarketable coal. Somewhat later, after the early period of dry coal operation, washers at the mines discharged millions of tons of coal dust as waste into the rivers and streams draining the anthracite region. In times of heavy rainfall considerable quantities of the accumulations in old culm banks are even today washed down into the streams although present day mining operations save and make use of a large quantity of fine sizes of coal which once were thrown away. Having once reached the feeding streams this fine anthracite begins a slow migration down to the lower river. It is estimated that coal now being removed from the Susquehanna at Harrisburg is the debris of mining operations in the Shamokin Valley of from 30 to 40 years ago and in the Lykens Valley from 20 to 25 years ago.

Begin as a by-product of the sand and gravel industry as early as 1890, the dredging of river coal has now become an important source of the fuel energy for towns and industries along these three rivers. Ten or 15 years ago it was believed that the supply of river coal would greatly diminish in the near future, but strange to say, production has steadily risen in the past few years. It stood at 500,000 tons in 1921, 792,000 tons in 1925, 943,000 tons in 1940 and reached a peak of 1,517,000 tons in 1941, an increase of 61 per cent over the preceding year. The largest supply of this coal is extracted from the sands of the Susquehanna from Sunbury to York Haven. Much of the power requirements of the Harrisburg metropolitan area are supplied by this salvaged fuel. In the Susquehanna, dredging operations are conducted between Pottsville and Reading, and a smaller amount is recovered in the Lehigh river and from the old canal bed of the Lehigh Coal Navigation Company.

In times of great fuel demand such as exists today, the production of river coal is greatly increased. The largest production yet recorded was in 1919 when 1,935,000 tons were dredged out of the three rivers. That year and 1941 represent the two highest peaks of dredge ever recorded. This river coal is usually suitable for use only in specially constructed furnaces but it has also been profitably made into briquettes for domestic burning. It affords, on the whole, the cheapest of all fuel sources of fuel since the labor cost involved in the dredging of river coal is far less than that involved in anthracite mining.

Production of from 12 to 18 tons per man day of labor is the average as compared to less than three tons per man day in the production of breaker coal. With the increased care of modern mining operations, the recovery at the mines of the fine sizes of coal, and the reclamation of old culm banks of the dry mining days, it is likely that in the future the dark sands of the Susquehanna, the Schuylkill and the Lehigh rivers will gradually grow pale again and the dredging of river coal finally end. But there still remains, slowly drifting down these three eastern rivers, enough of this invisible adaptation of major high school subjects to the war effort, and will make specific additions of certain types of subject matter either in the regular day's program or after school hours.

Will Reorganize School Courses for Victory Corps

Divisions and qualifications of each division of the Corps are outlined as follows: Air Service Division, for those interested and whose course in high school would qualify for entry; Land Service Division, the Army; Sea Service Division, the Navy; Production Service Division, local factory needs; Community Service Division, such as aircraft "spotter" service, first aid training, home nursing, etc.

In regard to Community Service Division, there are already three pupils from Bristol high school serving at the Aircraft Warning Service Station to the south of Bristol.

Some changes in length of periods are being considered at Bristol high school as the plan is put into effect. The entire program will be an expansion of high school training. Science and mathematics, as they have been taught, will be continued, but in a more thorough manner.

A course in aeronautics is already established at Bristol high school, and other subjects will be adjusted to present needs. The entire plan is backed by Washington officials, in collaboration with army and navy groups.

It is stated that qualifications for membership in the air, land, and sea service divisions are in no sense official requirements for admission to the army, navy or air services. The qualifications merely represent general consensus of National Policy Committee as to what constitutes the most effective preparation for these services within the framework of a high school curriculum.

Qualifications for participating in the various divisions are set forth by the national backers and local school officials.

War Forces Closing Of Bucks County Inns

Now she plans to close the inn, and her husband has taken a job in a Doylestown woodworking mill.

George Slioter, owner of Doylestown's Fountain House, reported that his profits are down 30 per cent, while Franz Brugger, proprietor of the Pipersville hotel, noted a 75 per cent drop.

"The week-ends are holding up fairly well," Brugger reported, "but we can't live on week-ends."

John Krautstein, whose Water Wheel tavern in Doylestown is 228 years old, is faced with the unusual problem these days of having steaks and no customers.

Even the Howard Johnson restaurants, situated on the busiest highways, have felt the pinch of rationing. One manager pointed out that his tourist and traveling salesman trade has almost disappeared, and that local residents are almost entirely supporting the establishment.

Leonard Dean, of the Hickory House, Willow Grove, has closed his dining room, too, but is making out well with his Victory Bar and room rentals, he said, probably because of the nearby war plant.

Only Frank Conti, who specializes in steak and spaghetti in his Warrington hostelry, reported that business was better than ever before. Most of his trade, he said, comes from the naval training base near Horsesham.

"But," he said sadly, "my chef was just ordered to take his physical examination, and if he's inducted, I don't know where I could ever get another one."

the Mediterranean for the North African expedition was cheering for it disclosed that adequate shipping and protection is available for new thrusts in whatever directions the Allied command selects.

The Russian front was comparatively quiet, with Soviet forces still holding the initiative and making minor offensive moves on all sectors of the Volga-Caucasus front.

A U. S. Navy Department revealed that American bombers have been active again in the Aleutians, and that in the Solomons the U. S. offensive on Guadalcanal still pushes ahead east and west of the airfield.

The Great Game of Politics

need do is live up to the public proclamations they have been making and an effective majority will be established in both branches—a majority which easily can compel Administration attention; a majority which can extend for the duration of the war, the forty-hour week; lessen confusion and force replacement of the more blatant New Deal incompetents, whose unaccustomed authority has gone to their heads.

AND, assuredly, it can compel a more realistic approach to the whole taxation business, which has been bungled—and is still being bungled. From the start, two things were clear about taxes. One was the soundness of Senator Byrd's proposal that the tax laws should be of such character, with rates high enough and categories broad enough as to require no revision for at least three years. The other was that inclusion of a general retail sales tax was inevitable. In no other way, it is conceded, can stability be promoted and needed revenue raised. Instead, the White House has steadily blocked the sales tax proposals and apparently has given no thought to the framing of a bill that will stand up for more than a single year. As a result, we have had two crude and defective laws in two years. Under the later one, it is expected 48,000,000 citizens will file returns, but the collections will fall so far short of producing the minimum amount needed that another bill to raise six more billion is already being asked.

EVEN without that, the 1942 law will require a vast army of new Treasury employees to administer, and no one can estimate the number of uncollectible returns nor gauge the fiscal confusion. Both will be large. Nor are matters improved by the $25,000 salary limit, conceived by the CIO, endorsed by Mrs. Roosevelt and now, under direction of the President, put into operation through an order from Economic Director Byrnes. This is an inexcusable piece of demagoguery as we have been treated to in a long time. Senator George, chairman of the Finance Committee, states that the result will be a loss rather than a gain in Treasury revenue, and that it will greatly boost administrative costs and general confusion. Certainly it will decrease the power of the limited number of people to whom it applies to buy war bonds and make charitable contributions. It is a cheap political gesture of which, with the nation at war, the Administration should be ashamed.

IF it were possible through this order to achieve a good purpose, there might be some defense for it. But all it does is further harass a small group of citizens without any resultant benefit to the Treasury. It is a half-baked, labor-leader scheme, vaguely aimed at the profit system and twice rejected by Congress. It is possible for the Republicans, with the Byrd group, to use their increased strength to nullify this foolish scheme and, by including the sales tax, early in 1943 enact a bill that will stand until victory and peace have come. If these are not the lines upon which the Republicans perform, then there will have been little national nourishment in addition to their power.

DOCTOR SHORTAGE

"The shortage of doctors, due to the war, puts an extra responsibility on all of us. Whenever practicable, a patient requiring home visits should call his physician as early in the day as possible. This will enable him to route his calls more efficiently, economize on tires, and gasoline and eliminate unnecessary duplication of trips. It will also save his time and energy and thereby extend the scope of his service in the community. Your cooperation will help in the maintenance of good health on the home front."

Club of Young Women Plan For Servicemen's Party

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 12—A recently-organized young women's club, formed by Doylestown residents, plans to arrange for entertainment of servicemen who are a distance from their homes on the coming holidays.

The club, which is yet unnamed, has asked local service clubs to aid in securing names of families willing to entertain one or two servicemen on Thanksgiving Day in their homes. To be chosen are the men who are far from their homes. The same plan will be carried out on Christmas and New Year's days.

The club will also stage a party for Navy men stationed at the U. S. Naval Air Base at Pitsburgh Field, tomorrow evening, in the educational building of Doylestown Presbyterian Church.

"FLIGHT LIEUTENANT"

are obviously trying to keep dark some closely guarded secret of the past, is the intriguing story of "The Gay Sisters," which opens today at the Grand Theatre.

The picture features a brilliant cast made up of Barbara Stanwyck, George Brent, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Nancy Coleman and a fine newcomer for whom film critics and preview audiences alike predict a bright future, Gig Young.

The story is adapted from the best-selling novel by Stephen Longstreet, whose powerful writing was transplanted in all its strength from print to film.

BRISTOL THEATRE

Art and chivalry had a pretty tough battle in the manly chest of Gary Cooper while he was acting on the set for "The General Died at Dawn," now playing at the Bristol Theatre, but art finally won and beautiful Madeleine Carroll, who co-stars with him, got a sock on the jaw.

The script, written by Broadway's greatest exponent of drama in the raw, Clifford Odets, calls for the hero to sock the heroine—not a lava tap, not a slap, but a real sock that begins down in the heels. Cooper objected. But the directors were adamant. So the sock was delivered.

RITZ THEATRE

Skillfully blending breath-taking adventure, tender romance and laugh-filled comedy with a timely story concerning the Florence Nightingales of the air, "Parachute Nurse" opened yesterday at the Ritz Theatre.

The bewildered Bumsteads currently are carrying on—to win the war and a thousand laughs! In "Blondie for Victory," which opened yesterday at the Ritz Theatre, Blondie enlists for the duration . . . of Dagwood's patience!

SEE POSSIBILITY OF DEADLOCK FOR GRID CHAMPIONSHIP

Lower Bucks County Conference Develops a Very Close Race

MORRISVILLE IN LEAD

The Race Will Definitely Be Decided Thanksgiving Day Morning

The Lower Bucks County football conference is a close race, with three teams having a chance to become deadlocked for the championship. The only club out of the running is Bensalem which has dropped its two games played.

Morrisville is leading the pack with victories over Bensalem and Langhorne (Morrisville's victory over Bristol earlier in the season was not a conference game). Bristol defeated Bensalem and lost to Langhorne, while Langhorne dropped a game to Morrisville and triumphed over Bristol.

So the standing at the present time is:

	Won	Lost
Morrisville	2	0
Bristol	1	1
Langhorne	1	1
Bensalem	0	2

The race will definitely be decided Thanksgiving Day morning when Morrisville comes to Bristol and Langhorne meets Bensalem at Cornwell Heights. Both of these are morning games.

If Langhorne can beat Bensalem and Bristol be successful against Morrisville then there will be a three-way tie for first place. Langhorne's season's record is two victories, a defeat, and a tie. Morrisville has won its last three games. It has lost three and has a tie to its credit.

Bristol is sporting the worst record of the quarter, it having won but one game, lost five, and deadlocked one. And to make matters worse, Clarence Bartholomew's boys have not scored a point in their last five games. Bensalem has won three games and lost two.

But when it comes to sectional games the teams are at their best and anything could happen. Bristol proved this by its performance at Burlington last week when in its annual "Little Brown Jug" game with the Jerseys, it held the powerful across-the-river lads to a 6-0 score and even went so far as to completely outplay their opponents in the final half of the game.

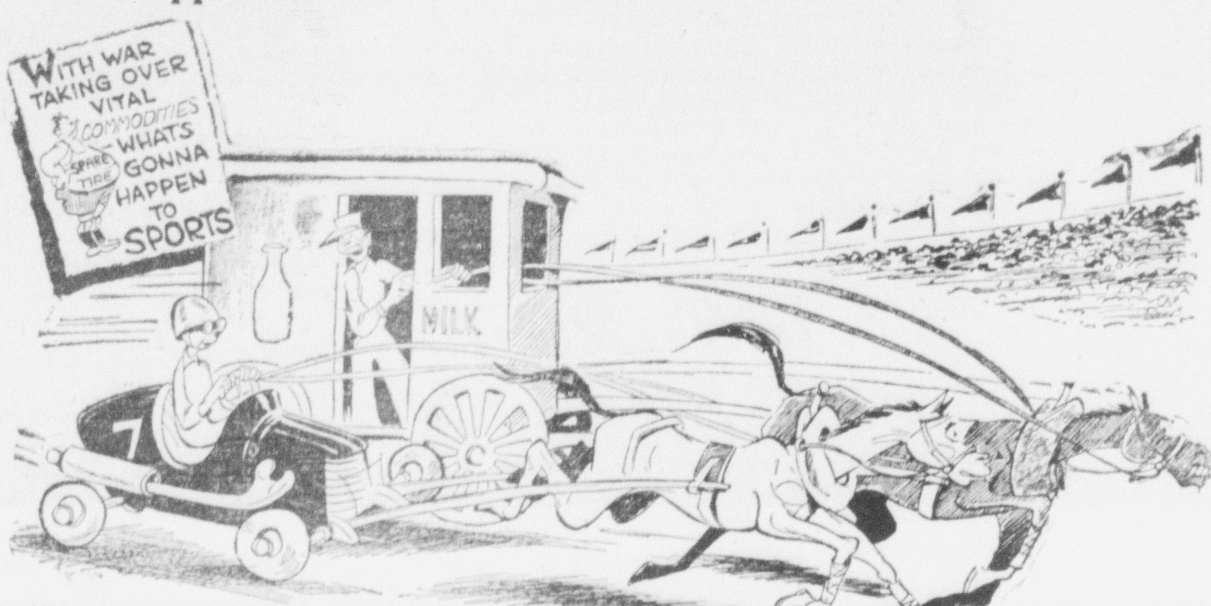

The entire league standing may depend on the outcome of the Bristol-Morrisville contest. Morrisville scored a 14-0 triumph over the Bunnies in a non-league game and has been going strong since and Bristol will have to equal its Burlington performance to have a chance against Hoffman's Bulldogs.

The passing combination of Knox and Plannery of Coach Charley Beck's Langhorne Redskins will have much to say about the Langhorne-Bensalem game. It was the passing of this combine which led to the last-play touchdown against Bristol and Coach Weir-erold's boys must have a strong aerial offense to upset the dope and beat the Langhorne scholars.

But the fans must wait until Thanksgiving Day to see what the outcome of the whole situation will be.

If you have a house to rent, advertise it in The Courier.

and pear orchards will yield approximately 2,280,000 bushels more than in 1941.

For the first time in Pennsylvania, the Department revealed, dehydrating of apples is taking a prominent place in the processing industry. A number of processing plants have installed machinery for that purpose and a considerable portion of the crop has been purchased for dehydrating. All apples processed in that manner, the Department added, are sold to the Federal Government.

Looking forward to the 1943 planting season, the Federal-State Crop Reporting Service announced that Pennsylvania's strawberry crop will be approximately 100 acres smaller than this year. Strawberries, the Service added, will take up more than 3,800 acres, while 40 per cent of the beds for picking will be old ones. Throughout the central and southeastern sections of the State, beds appear excellent with a good matting of plants. In the western counties, however, unfavorable and wet weather made cultivating difficult and weeds have overrun many beds. The reduced number of new settings is due to a shortage of labor, particularly in the western section of the State.

Pennsylvania Farm Roundup

By William Brockman

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Nov. 5 — (INS) — Blight and rot have taken a heavy toll of Pennsylvania's potato fields. Latest estimates place the 1942 crop at 17,350,000 bushels, representing a decrease of 790,000 bushels below the production indicated on September 1. If these estimates are correct, the Department of Agriculture reported, this year's production will be the lowest in 41 years and 3,160,000 bushels under that of 1941. The crop rot resulted, the Department explained, from the wet season. Many badly blighted fields in northern areas will have to be abandoned while others will not be dug due to high labor cost or an inability to secure help. The estimated yield per acre is 110 bushels, which compares with 130 bushels last year and a previous 10-year average of 120 bushels.

Pennsylvania's orchards, however, are coming up to early expectations. Unlike the potato crop, latest estimates for the State's four leading fruit crops compare favorably with the indicated production of September 1. Although slight reductions are expected in the cherry and peach crops, apple
